

The University of Scranton

The University of Scranton is a community of scholars and learners that offers unique challenges and opportunities. In the Jesuit tradition, the University strives to prepare “men and women for others” through a rigorous academic program and a wide range of extracurricular activities that enhance personal development.

At The University of Scranton, intercollegiate athletics are an important component within a comprehensive learning experience. Over the last 30 years, the University’s student-athletes have achieved an impressive record: 78 NCAA tournament appearances, three national championships, 51 all-Americans, 22 academic all-Americans and 13 NCAA post-graduate scholarship recipients.

The University’s heritage traces its roots to 1888 with the founding of St. Thomas College by the Diocese of Scranton. The school received its university charter in 1938. The Society of Jesus began administering the University in 1942, when Scranton became one of 28 Jesuit colleges and universities in the United States.

The University consists of four academic divisions: the College of Arts and Sciences, Kania School of Management, Panuska College of Professional Studies, and the College of Graduate and Continuing Education. Full-time undergraduate enrollment is approximately 4,000 students. Total enrollment is more than 5,300.

The University awards bachelor’s and master’s degrees in a wide variety of programs in business, communication, education, health sciences, humanities, and natural and social sciences. Scranton also features strong pre-professional programs in medicine and law. The University has had 117 Fulbright and other international scholars since 1972, placing it among the top undergraduate schools in the country in this category.

The faculty, 86 percent of whom hold a doctoral degree, are teachers who also pursue scholarship and research, often involving students. The student-to-faculty ratio is 12 to 1.

The University offers five-year bachelor’s/master’s programs, a Doctor of Physical Therapy, an Honors Program, a Faculty-Student Research Program, study abroad, internships, Army ROTC and exchange programs with other Jesuit colleges and universities.
